Dear Dr. Mark Long,

I recently came across a discussion about a version of Aspect magazine from 1972 regarding the cover photograph by Roger Camp. I enjoyed reading the comments and wanted to add my own since I took the photograph. The woman in the photo was my wife and the "moon" was a hanging lamp in the shape of a ball. I had another photo of mine on the cover of a later issue of peeling paint on a window as I recall.

Ed Hogan was kind to me as these were some of the first photos I had published. I was teaching English at Eastern Illinois University when I took the "moon" photo and later taught both English and Photography at the college level.

I am retired from teaching but continue to photograph and write poetry.

Best regards,

Roger Camp
